NGOs fight vote-buying

Movement launched to change RP politics

By Philip C. Telesco

WITH 12 MONTHS TO GO BEFORE THE NEXT elections, veteran community organizers and development workers across the country yesterday launched a nationwide movement to get rid of vote-buying.

The Changgibilis Movement, which includes former Social Welfare Secretary Cecilia Soliman, will map out the "vote-buying vulnerable areas" so that NGOs could pour their resources there and educate the voters of Philippine politics.

The movement plans to turn these places into "vote-buying free zones" come election day as a beginning of its long-term vision to end "patronage and transactional politics" in the country by 2022.

"Our members are already going around the country so that we could map out the vulnerable vote-buying areas," Soliman said at the group's

Vigilante killings in Davao alarm UN

By Nikkie Diaz

VIGILANTE-STYLE EXECUTIONS in Davao City have "significantly worsened" since 2007, with death squads claiming a victim almost every day, Philip Alston, a UN special rapporteur, said in a report released in Manila.

Alston said in a 16-page follow-up report to the Human Rights Council of the United Nations that the activities of the death squads were "most troubling."

"Davao City continues to be a hotbed of extrajudicial killings, and the vigilante-style death squad killings in Davao have significantly worsened since 2007," he said.

US, Costa Rica report swine flu deaths

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON—A man with underlying heart conditions became the third person infected with swine flu to die in the United States, while Costa Rica reported the country's first fatality caused by swine flu, health officials reported on Sunday.

In Tokyo, authorities confirmed Japan's fourth case of swine flu in a teenager who recently returned from a school trip to Canada with the three other Japanese who have contracted the virus. (See related story on Page A4.)

Also on Sunday, Australia and Norway joined the list of nations with confirmed cases of swine flu.

In Washington state, a Snohomish County man in his 30s died on Thursday from what appeared to be complications from swine flu, the state's health department said in a statement issued on Saturday.

The man had underlying heart conditions and viral pneumonia at the time of his death, but neither flu was considered a factor in his death, the statement said.

The man, who was not identified, reportedly began showing symptoms on April 30. His death and that of a 53-year-old man in Costa Rica on Saturday brings the global death toll to 53.

Like other deaths outside

Mexico, the Costa Rican man suffered from complicating illnesses, including diabetes and chronic lung disease, according to the health ministry.

US authorities earlier reported another flu death involving a toddler with a heart defect and a woman with rheumatoid arthritis.

Officials in Canada said the woman who died there also had

Libya needs OFWs; Iceland asked to ease restrictions

THE NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY OF alliance is poised to be a strong market for skilled overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) this year as it is in need of more than 15,000 migrant workers, Labor Secretary Francisco Duque said yesterday.

In Iceland, the Philippines has asked the government to lift its restrictive emigration and exchange policies in order to enable Filipino workers to send more money to their families back home.

Quoting a report from Philippine labor officials in Reykjavik, Duque said all such Libyans had been left relatively unaffected by the global financial crisis—unlike major OFW destinations like Dubai and Taiwan—and was expecting a construction boom.

"The employment prospects in Libya and nearby nations are favorable for OFWs as they continue to be the preferred choice among foreign employers," Duque said.

Job opportunities also abound in the hotel, oil and gas, and health sectors, as well as construction industries in Libya's neighbors like Algeria, Chad, Mali and Morocco, he said.

"Countries like Denmark, Denmark and Al India are currently recruiting thousands of OFWs for their development and construction projects," Duque said.

Talks are also underway to allow Filipino health workers to work in Libyan hospitals, he said.

When labor officials had asked their health ministry to allow around 4,000 Filipino medical workers to come to the United Kingdom and Hong Kong medical centers and other hospitals and clinics in the country, Duque said.

Philippine Ambassador to Oslo Elizabeth B. Bantayan, meanwhile, is in her capacity as country ambassador in Iceland, raised concerns over the foreign exchange restrictions when she presented her credentials to Icelandic President Olafur Ragnar Grönn on April 28.

She suggested as a possible alternative allowing for a specific period of time for currency exchange or remittance up to maximum amounts of P500-$500.

Bantayan stressed the constraints of Filipino working in Iceland "not just because the earnings but the health and life or death needs of their families in the Philippines."

Quoting a report from the embassy, the Department of Foreign Affairs said Icelandic officials wanted the ambassador they would convey her message to the Central Bank of Iceland.

In Reykjavik, Filipino living there who have a valid Philippine driver's license may exchange it for a Icelandic license without having to take the written and practical tests, the DFA said yesterday.

Quoting a report from the Philippine embassy in Brussels, the DFA said the reciprocal visa the result of an administrative arrangement between the embassy and the Belgian Federal Public Service, Mobility and Transport, an initiative the embassy began working on eight years ago. RP's P4,000 per kilo fish faces extinction

By Gabriel Cardona
Inquirer Staff Writer

DAVAO CITY—SCIENTISTS ARE RACING against time to save the "baking" (or baka), the country's most expensive fish, from possible extinction.

Wendy Rosario, chief of the National Integrated Fisheries Technology Development Center here, said the baking (Centropomus plausilis) is now considered an endangered species.

"The fish is clean, rare and delicious," Rosario said.

The baking is endemic to the Cagayan River that stretches from Cagayan to Quirino provinces in Cagayan Valley and to the Abao River in the Cordilleras.

It is also called the "President's Fish" because of its steep price of P4,000 a kilo, gross, which only rich and influential people, like politicians and businessmen, can afford.

Rosario said that in 1997, when biodiversity earned a study on the baking, the researchers still found the fish being sold in abundance in public markets in Cagayan.

"At that time, it was very cheap (at P100 a kilo), but it was very rare (it was very plentiful). But this time, with little to very much (you can't catch them anymore)," Rosario said.

Over the years, he said, the baking population was decimated by over-catch and unregulated catching during its spawning season, coupled by the destruction of its habitats, like mangrove forests and watershed areas, and the pollution of rivers and lakes.

Ray of hope

The baking species runs to six days a year from October to November. A commercial fish from that time in fresh water but migrates to marine waters afterward, it enters downstream to spawn and then goes upstream to the upper reaches of the Cagayan River to grow to the point.

In 2003, a 400-gram baking caught in April, Cagayan, was taken to Rosario's office here. The catch provided the powerful ray of hope for scientists researching on the fish.

"We had wanted it to breed in captivity," Rosario said.

But the problem was how to find a mate for the captured baking. Because of its rarity, Rosario said, they were not able to catch one.

"We even tried to get baking. But, I had contacts from Indonesia (but we could not catch)," he said.

He said he also tried the best fishermen in the area and offered a higher price for a five catch that he could use for research purposes.

"But, you'd imagine that, we did not get anything," he said.

He said the late Tony (Abe) Mayor Clarence Rosario had been helping him find the elusive fish, especially in his town. But in 2002, Rosario was murdered while on his way to a wedding in Cagayan, Laguna.

The only one baking in captivity eventually died in May last year when Sybilene "Gomez" ripped off the head of the WFTU, scientists and exposed the fish to the elements.

Its death after five years in captivity brought the effort to save the baking "back to square one," Rosario said.

In November last year, Rosario said a 700-gram baking was caught and taken to his office. But it died the following month.

"It could be because of stress...the migration from upstream. The Cagayan River is almost 500 km long," he said.

Team working collectively

Rosario told this year's team to create a team that would work on the baking collectively. It's the end.

The team is composed of biologists (scientists who study plants and lakes), biologists, chemists and zoologists from the National Fisheries and Development Institute in Cagayan City, where Rosario is executive director.

"We have six people who will work on the biology, people who will work on profiling the Cagayan River, and three who will work on collecting the fingerlings because these are really very elusive," he said.

In a paper that he presented in a lecture from last year, Rosario appealed for people's cooperation and participation in the conservation and preservation of the baking.

"Consulting on this significant endeavor will surely pay dividends that will redound to the preservation of this precious gift that we can proudly present as a heritage to generations to come," he said. "This is the mission we must support and be part of."

Artillery attack kills 257 civilians in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO—A MASSIVE BARRAGE OF ARTILLERY in Sri Lanka's northern war zone killed at least 257 civilians and wounded 814 overnight, a government doctor said on Sunday, calling it the bloodiest day he had seen in the government's offensive against the Tamil Tiger rebels.

V. Shanmugapriya, a physician working in the war zone, said he found many more men have been killed than women because more men were being housed in the area without being brought to the makeshift hospital he runs.

Shanmugapriya described seeing shells fly through the air, with some falling close to the hospital, sending many to other shelter in buildings.

The rebel-linked Tamil Eelam Liberation Front said about 2,000 people were killed and accused the Sri Lankan forces of launching the attack, a charge the military denied.

REUTERS spokeswoman Bridgette Naranjo said it was only using small arms in its effort to wipe out the Tamil Tiger rebel group and there is no shelling taking place.

The government had sent medical supplies into the area earlier in the year, but there had been shortages of pharmaceuticals, women and babies had made treatment difficult, Shanmugapriya said.

"We are doing the best and want progress as quickly as we can. We are doing what is possible. The situation is overwhelming, nothing is within our control," he said.

Shanmugapriya said he had sought the help of volunteers in the zone.

The government vowed two weeks ago to ease things heavily weaponized into the zone, saying that was necessary to end the conflict. But the rebels said the government's military attacks have caused civilian deaths, despite the promise of no civilian deaths. Tamil civilians in the zone have been killed.

Reports of the fighting are difficult to verify because the government, local hospitals and aid workers have the zone.

United Nations figures compiled last month showed that nearly 6,500 civilians had been killed since 1983 in the government's war against the 25-year-old war with the rebels.

The government has backed off international calls for a humanitarian ceasefire, saying the rebel-linked rebels would be the ones to start the fighting to stop.

It has accused the rebels of using civilians in the war as human shields, and Shanmugapriya said the rebels had killed families who tried to escape the war zone in earlier days, killing innocent people.

The rebels have been fighting since 1983 for a separate state for ethnic Tamil, who have suffered decades of marginalization in the hands of government controlled by the Sinhalese majority.

King James unstoppable Cavs go up, 3-0; controversy mars Nuggets win

ATLANTA—NATIONAL BASKETBALL ASSOCIATION's Western Conference Finals Game 1 saw LeBron James lead the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 107-92 victory over the Denver Nuggets.

The triumph gave the Cavaliers a commanding 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals series, which Cleveland reached with a four-game sweep of Detroit. James improved on his previous high of 28 points in the postseason and was just one day off his career playoff high of 45.

"The second half, we actually put the ball in LeBron's hands," Cleveland coach Mike Brown said. "We took the ball and put it in his hands, and he said he was going to score for us."

"I said, 'Okay,' Brown said. "I told everybody else, 'Let's defend.'"

The Cavaliers, coming off their win against the Cleveland Cavaliers, led the Cavs from leading their second-round series against the Detroit Pistons 3-0.

The Cavs had completed the record of six made shots by LeBron in 2004.

The Cavs led by just one point in the third quarter but then took the lead.

They were back, however, by the end of the third quarter, but they were back.

Of course they were also here by James, whose scoring streak at the end of the third gave Cleveland a 72-65 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

Fourth quarter James also handed out eight assists and had a game-high 12 rebounds as Cleveland won 107-92.

In Dallas, Carmelo Anthony took a minor-minor three-point shot with one second remaining to give the Denver Nuggets a 106-105 victory over Dallas.

Shooting off what appeared to be a foul by Dallas' Jason Pritchett that was awarded, Anthony drained an off-balance shot from beyond the arc to give the Nuggets a 1-0 lead over the Mavericks in the best-of-seven second-round series.

"That's why he's one of the greatest players in the world. It's not a great shot," said Denver's Chauncey Billups.

On the deciding possession, Anthony scored to his right and appeared to be fouled by Pritchett but instead was whistled on for a layup.

The Mavericks, who had two leads in the series but the Nuggets could have been able to start shooting late in the series, wanted to make the final shot Denver was in their play to cut into the lead with the Nuggets' Bryant's shot.

And now, Dallas was another team who had won collected and had the shot.

What do you want me to do, take him out and then I get a 1-point shot to the point? That's what I want.

And (Lamar) Odom, president of League and Basketball Operations, issued a statement at the game saying officials got it wrong.

CARMELLO ANTHONY attempts before taking the game-winning layup.

In the end of the Dallas-Carroll game this evening, the officials issued an instruction that resembled by Anthony Pritchett at Carroll's Anthony, just prior to Anthony's point shot.

Cejka's unexpected date: A Tiger

WINTER HILL, FLA.—After Cejka made a solid start in the 125 Players Championship with a 54-hole lead, he was back on top in the final round with Tiger Woods.

Cejka kept out of the water over the closing holes and secured up with an even-par 71 to build the biggest lead over these rivals in the 30 years of this prestigious event.

But the week might just be starting, as the week's 11 come back into contention.

Woods appeared to be struggling throughout the week, but he was back on top in the final round with Tiger Woods.

50-foot and missed others from inside 10 feet. But he got a huge break at the end of his round.

Woods kept his focus, running through the green and building toward the water and the hole.

Woods slipped to 4 feet and scored par for an even par 70.

Cejka was at 17 under 205, and Cejka's 71 was a solid score.

Woods' 71 was a solid score, but he was still in the lead. He was at 17 under 205, and Cejka's 71 was a solid score.

HARVEY ANTHONY BELIEVES that our economy will see success in growing this year. That's good news. Firms in Singapore and Thailand have already suffered severe contractions, so we are seeing here in East Asia still expected to grow positively, albeit much more slowly. People may differ on how much they expect the Malaysian economy to grow.

been dramatically to double-digit negative growth rates since at least the middle of last year, we are all aware why that might happen. Thailand and Japan, whose exports have been a dominant source of demand for their products, we export a much smaller part of our production. That is, the bulk of our production is still bought by Filipinos themselves—through household consumption, spending, through spending by businesses for its business, and through government expenditures. And so it we can expect such spending to continue growing enough to offset the dramatic fall in demand from cash-strapped foreign— and hence still achieve positive overall growth this year.

Abstract

The details of the industry and service sector growth also give a more sobering picture. In India typically—composed of mining/quarrying, manufacturing, construction and utilities—the last three are fast rising, quarrying (12.3 percent) and construction (12.1 percent). But agriculture, the seemingly impressive sector,

The domestic production of goods and services (GDP) grew by 1.3 percent on an annual basis as of the last quarter of last year. That pace of growth did not come from agriculture (including fisheries and forestry), as it grew by only 2.8 percent. Rather, it came from services, which grew 4.5 percent, and in industry which grew 2 percent. But the numbers suggest the agriculture at least grew fast enough to make up for population growth. In other words, farm production grew fast enough to ensure that each Filipino produced share of the overall Philippine GDP increased. It is time to look for the Philippines to move into the middle income category.

It shows that production of key food crops actually fell. Rice and corn dropped by 2.3 and 4.5 percent, respectively. Cattle were also down 1.5 percent. Livestock other than poultry grew only 1.4 percent (less than that population growth). It was the Between 2004 and 2006, there may be a gap in supply. Some estimates say that the world will see more supply in the next few years than all that has been used or in the next few years," Lushan said.

Lushan said demand for copper will increase largely from electricity generation and steel industries as they develop and develop countries.

Ascott team in RP rallies behind 'cheerleader'

By Corie Salomon-Harmon

AFTER GENDAP WAS ONLY 10 YEARS OLD when he decided that the hospitality industry was where he wanted to be.

It was an "instinctive" response in a then young person first in his family in Singapore with his diplomat father and the service family that opened his eyes to this field.

From then on, young Arthur prepared himself for a career in the hotel and restaurant business, then when he was still in school, he took on part-time jobs that he knew would prepare him for the role he intended to play in his professional life.

For personal life studies along his way and obtained a hotel and restaurant administration degree from Sheridan College in Brampton, Ontario, Canada.

Today, the 47-year-old Canadian citizen, who now lives in Bangkok to a Filipino couple, is the country general manager of hotel, international in the Philippines.

Biographical in Singapore, hotel is national in the world's largest international service evidence owner-operating, carrying the brands Accor, Somerset and Crowne.

Morale booster

Arthur has great plans for Ascott Philippines, particularly the expansion of its facilities here. The work in the hospitality industry now facing tough challenges grows the photo economy, to downtown, provinces to be modified.

Coping with today's realities become the No. 1 concern and Arthur had to take on a new role, something that couldn't be found in his position in school—that of a cheerleader of his people.

"We (Ascott) are affected by the downturn but we're not as bad as some in the hotel industry," he says.

Business is down, especially when compared to how fast it was in the past two years and will last year.

when the impact of the global financial crisis caused everything to be in a state of flux.

He knew this would affect the morale of his people, their services and, inevitably, the hotel itself.

"My job now is to talk good news, I assure them, the staff, that the current difficulties are temporary. I tell them to keep the faith," he says. And he says before he leaves.

"I am the cheerleader of the group, that's my job," he says.

Also, despite current difficulties, the incentive program for the staff stays.

For now, Arthur's main focus is on further improving services and preparing for the new opening.

Of the four properties it is operating since the company entered the country.

At the company, Arthur takes care of all of Ascott's businesses in the country—all in Manila, Ascott Manila, Somerset, Crowne, Somerset Millennium, Somerset Selecto.

Ascott Manila, which offers exclusive services, maintains the top executives and industry leaders. In some cases, they are followed by European, American and Australian guests.

Somerset is ideal for executives and their families looking to balance work and family life. It offers modern amenities in a vibrant with recreational facilities, lifestyle amenities and business support services. Its guests are mostly locals.

of their staff. These days, it's the local guys who are doing all the work, Arthur says.

On top of things

In being a manager, Arthur says, Ascott's division into the products added services and packages, including airport transfers and other Internet use.

"My dream for Ascott Philippines is to have it lead to top performers from the staff and the whole team for I still don't know," he says.

With the challenges facing the business, Arthur's given plan for now is focused on getting management attention for the company.

At the same time, it is operating since the company entered the country.

"If there are, they can expect me to be there again in a few days to check if things have been addressed," he says.

He leads the company in setting its strategies and direction.

Arthur says managing Ascott's success has been difficult because he has a dynamic and capable team.

The company office in Ascott is to get to see the heads of human resources, finance and sales departments once a week.

'Disconnection'

He dreams that dealing with a Filipino staff wasn't just easy when he was first starting in the Philippines with Sheraton. He started in the early 1990s.

Arthur, being a diplomat's son, has lived overseas most of his life.

He was born in Bangkok, Thailand and became a Canadian citizen when the entire Gendap family decided to settle down in the early 1970s.

After college, from 1980 to 1985, he worked with several high-profile executives in Toronto, Canada.

Leap of faith

In 1985, Arthur decided to give himself a couple of years to work outside Canada.

He moved to Atlanta to take a position as hotel and beverage manager at Sheraton-La Jolla and Sheraton-Hilltop, Ohio.

And in 1990, he moved to the Philippines to join Sheraton as its executive assistant manager. Having been at work in some other roles and in various working styles, he found it difficult to adjust to Filipino ways.

"There was a lot of disconnect at the start, though at that time I was a Filipino-looking guy who talks like a white guy," he remembers. The first year was really challenging.

"They would wonder what I'd like them to be. There seemed to be a sense of urgency. They assumed 'you' to be someone who didn't create a lot of things they were not submitting," he says.

After a while, he became accustomed to the Filipino ways and he came to like it.

And when he moved to Ascott Philippines in 2004, after more in Kuala Lumpur and Jakarta, he was already no longer working with Filipinos.

"There's more learning in a new environment, everything was just a job. Here, when you see them learn and respect, they will give their best to everything they do," he says.

Arthur has been out of Canada for 30 years now, not for his own sake but for his family's future.

And when asked where to next, he was quick to answer: "I'd like to stay here because."

ALL's Yarnall heads APREA

JOHN T. YARNALL, executive vice president and chief financial officer of Apollo Land Inc. (ALI), has been named as the new president of the Asian Pacific Real Estate Association (APREA).

Yarnall, who has been with APREA since 2004, will be based in Hong Kong and will be responsible for the association's operations in the Asia-Pacific region.

APREA is a nonprofit organization established in 1985 as a voluntary body representing the real estate industry in the Asia-Pacific region. It is a not-for-profit organization and its primary purpose is to effectively promote the real estate industry in the Asia-Pacific region and to foster cooperation and understanding between the real estate industry and the public.

Yarnall has been with APREA since 2004, when he was appointed as its executive vice president. He has been instrumental in the association's growth and development, particularly in the area of public relations and community outreach.

Yarnall has a long history in the real estate industry, having worked for several years in the United States before moving to Hong Kong in 1995. He has a degree in business administration from the University of California, Berkeley, and has been a member of several professional organizations, including the National Association of Realtors and the International Real Estate Federation.

Talent management opportunities in an economic downturn

OWING TO DETERIORATING public performance, cost-cutting during a downturn is often necessary to ensure future competitiveness. At a small, state-owned company, however, the downturn and what can be done to survive are not the only issues. Instead of addressing the end problem, in some cases, it is a lack of "right people" that is blocking growth, creating additional personnel problems and further slowing the situation of management toward "strategic thinking"—creating this practice as a vicious cycle.

The problem is exacerbated when the downsizing and other cost-cutting measures results in losing more "right people" in the company, thereby increasing the percentage of wrong people. To make matters worse, companies react to finding training and staff development programs, further damaging morale and perhaps the company's reputation among prospective employees.

Before downsizing, companies asking these questions: What kind of problems is your company trying to solve? Is there a concern about what happens where business activity becomes lackluster? Would you be in a better position to "make it" as the economy if you had kept your people engaged in your company that resulted in layoffs?

If so, alternatives—such as voluntary retirement—can reduce costs, bring turnover, and reduce turnover, or the combination of business risks and to reduce discretionary expenses may be preferable to downsizing.

Opportunity #1: Get wrong people off the bus. There's nothing like a good economic downturn to get rid of dead wood. A nagging, strong can be an opportunity time for management to deal with performance problems. Though often difficult to execute, an overhauling justification results in ending getting wrong people off the bus to make room space.

Opportunity #2: A time to appreciate talent. Rather than focusing on losing and underdevelopment programs, companies would be wise to use this period to upgrade talent, and better engage existing staff. Part of this might mean paying back to the company a portion of the cost savings, for example, voluntary retirement and development programs to engage jobs to be more engaging.

A company that employees believe in, and caring about, can strengthen its viable proposition to existing and prospective employees, making the company more attractive to work for and strongly positioning itself for growth during a recovery. The benefit is that among employees based significantly helps the company that continues to engage to retain the commitment, even as the company cuts personnel costs elsewhere.

Studies should have shown that although overall levels of investment may have fallen, the quality of work has lived on in innovation. And support-

Contradicting roles

The most evident aspect of Jaja's style is not his perfect imitative powers, but in his amazing ability to combine rules of engineering and structural design.

The Queens County Engineer's Office had repeatedly questioned the capacity of the existing spans of the Lady in the City in situations involving winds. But engineers "Miles" proved them wrong, as the height of the temporary-lane system, the Lady looked calm, and comforting. Believing the structure did not collapse.

However, rather than the Redoubt, which serves as focal point of the private ceremony of the President, Muskrat's May in Tagaytay City continues to baffle engineers and onlookers alike since the usage of the Shave Land, he says, "There several feet above the ground supported only by an ice that appears like a wisp of

It was canonically established as a religious congregation on Aug. 19, 1928, and declared of public utility by Pope Pius XI on Nov. 20, 1929.

The beautification projects of the two sisters is now in full swing to prepare for their anniversary week of service and worship here and abroad.

"We are working for their benefit and a really results based work. In housing we are asking our people to pay for and support the cause of the homeless' cause here," California said.

New shows at West Gallery

"BORN Over a Long Time" by Bernardo Pompa

WEST GALLERY'S NEW EXHIBITS feature the latest works of Bernardo Pompa, Fred Mader, Karl Lach and Jonathan Olson.

Pompa paints what he collectively calls "Things We Wish We Were." What they are exactly are left to Pompa's imagination and the audience's ability to interpret the abstract marks he set on Pompa's canvas.

Painting freely, Pompa uses the "tools to practice" in continuing experiments in discovering meaning in such brushstrokes. He's still learning, finding traces of life in those even during the most fleeting moments.

In "badOO," Mader focuses on portraits that show the inner pain of the subjects: people and the working class in Mexico, where he was born and raised.

The Architectural Drafting graduate from the Milwaukee University of Science and Technology discovers "the dignity of those of those who suffer," the "Greatest pride that only gives comfort during moments of evil and indignity," and "a glimpse of someone that is not purely evil, but also loved with God, mercy, love and many more."

Lach presents what appears to be a series of portraits. "The concept are either people in close to me, but the characters are different and unique in our lives. I think to explore—our temporary society. How it changes over the different situations that define us as individuals."

Olson's painting follows a series of figures in a room, but not looking back. "I always try and find some concepts and images in my head, thinking how you can use this and that, and how you can translate it into a finished piece. I don't even consciously try and make it necessary. But I have been there all along. Most times I've been doing this all my life."

Olson's latest exhibit, "Designed for the People: 'Designed for the People,'" explores the world's continuing search on what makes a good painting.

The large-scale works, ranging from 10 to 100 ft, will be more consistent and that in terms of surface compared to "The Last Days of Pompeii," which is mostly, says Olson, a series of portraits.

Jonathan's painting features images of, in effect, competition. Olson believes that he has not and should be in a better position to do good and make something.

"These are based on personal images that I think of while doing the paintings, or ideas I just had or see from various materials and print media. My recent works and projects are created in ideas that I had and try to develop while in college. I would say, most of the time, I'm just trying to achieve and develop these ideas," Olson says.

"My personal interest is still to find out what makes a good painting, and how to make a good painting. A conceptual piece is to be a creative person. When I create a drawing of a more realistic and in a realistic manner."

'Soul Seasons' at Mag:net

THE 35 MANILA ART group presents "Soul Seasons," which opens on May 11 at Mag:net Cafe Gallery at Rosedale High Street, Taipei.

Jonathan's painting explores the many seasons using portraits.

"They show the intense search and identification of personal experience," Pompa says. "The action of portraits are always ready to look with the different attitudes of the human figure."

Define success

BANGS GARCIA, FEM COVER GRL FOR MAY doesn't think being a pop star is easy. "Success depends on how a woman makes herself," she says in the cover story. "It's not just about the money. It's about the way she spends it. Some women make more money than I do, but they're not successful."

TONYBOY CEJUNGAO beamed as he mingled with the audience before show time last week. It was the album launch of the reunited 1980s band Electrahouse at the GSIS Theater.

On the band's entrance, the hottest guy was playing as a pure rhythm guitarist. "He's not really good at this," Geronimo said.

"Maybe they're just using me to pull in more people," he said.

The Electrahouse, a major influence on Filipino musicians who came of age during the 1970s, disbanded in the '80s. It played a role in the rock scene last year via a single of pop-rocking original lead guitarist Jesse Delgado.

and drummer Lino Tejada, and with two new members—bassist Ruel Tancin and rhythm guitarist Louie de Jesus.

Tancin and De Jesus were said to be instrumental in reviving the group. Tancin, a devotee of the United States, was a fan, the weight was Delgado and Tejada and then moving to the United States. The three eventually hooked up with De Jesus, a former percussionist, to play the band.

AT ENDERUN COLLEGES, students are taught primarily that good management is all about good service.

In a room situated in the middle of its new campus in the Makati hill in Fort Bonifacio, Taguig City, there of Enderun's top management stressed that in any business, but particularly the hospitality business, service is the bottom line.

The reason was to instill to provide the visitors a sampling of the kind of education the school offers an students a customer by installing a 4000 and an alternative text of the new campus, a complex of the open-style building with white Asian touches that remains a work in progress.

In Senior Masters, Enderun pioneer, shared much of his lessons from his mission, from the campus management, you, Masters said, stressed that respect for the customer should come first. "It is what they want that counts," Drucker told his students. Quality, Masters recommended Drucker to saying, was defined by what the customer got out of the product and was willing to pay for it. "It produces a real quality because it is hard to make and control too of money... Customers pay only for what is of use to them and gives them value," Masters learned from his mentor.

"Drucker said you have to know what you are doing, then do it well and do it with love," Masters said. The Enderun pioneer said Drucker also believed it was not enough to train students for employment. They also had to be provided the skills to become entrepreneurs. Drucker believed, according to Masters, that colleges had to create much more and represent to society.

Also, Drucker said, education is more of food and beverage and senior hospitality management faculty members, grew guests a sampling of the points of a hospitality course. He conducted a short write and food tasting session, as he tried to break the myth that it was not impossible to match hotel cuisine with home.

The "spiced" session covered guests to interesting flavors and new wines and continued everyone that good food, regardless of its origin, would always had a good value to match it.

As Masters stressed that the customer was a learning opportunity as well, as he personally covered the value for the guests, he explained that at Enderun they understood the need for "more personalized service for guests as is business."

In creating students to be good managers of hotels and other hospitality establishments, he said the school emphasized that the business was all about service.

The "marketing" was supported by a demonstration of Chef Master's kitchen mastery. The French master cook was personally supervised by the Master Executive Formation (UEF) to ensure that its "philosophy, culture, principles and techniques are properly transmitted to students."

Adding from R.E. Enderun, a long-time student of the college, has also participated within Raffles International School of Hotel Management in Switzerland and Spain. It offers bachelor's degrees in business administration and other hotel-based hospitality management, major to culinary arts or hotel administration. Annual fee for two semesters is about P300,000.

Mind Mapping conference today

THERE'S A THOUGHT THAT can be applied to anything that requires thinking, which is everything.

It is called mind mapping, and the good news is the originator of the technique, Tony Buzan, is in Manila to teach teachers this creative way to think so they can be more effective students.

Buzan returns to Manila for a series of conferences on Mind Mapping today and tomorrow at RBC Tower 2 in Makati City as the "Innovative and Creative Conference."

He will be joined by Henry B. from the Mind Mapping Center in Singapore and two Filipino ambassadors, namely, Dr. Leticia Francisco of the University of the Philippines and Lilia Vergara of the De La Salle University System.

color in organizing his thoughts and coming up with new ideas.

One of the most innovative uses of Mind Mapping is in teaching. Buzan shares this technique, which he taught to mind maps when they got from classroom lessons instead of taking down linear notes. Buzan has more resources and demonstrates more refined mind mapping.

Through the use of Mind Maps, Buzan introduced connections between ideas more effectively. Buzan also uses his own graphic representation, learning through Mind Mapping becomes more meaningful, clear, easier to learn.

"Teachers can also use Mind Mapping to assess students' skills in problem-solving and critical thinking. They can present students with a case that needs to be analyzed and solved. Students will then use Mind Maps to assess logical solutions."

All that is needed for mind mapping is a blank sheet of paper, colored pens and a spark of imagination.

The more than 30 years since, Buzan has been giving seminars and teaching students, teachers, businesspeople and even well-known leaders about Mind Mapping and its limitless applications. Confirms children and adults from Mind Mapping for simple tasks such as listing students for a birthday party and more complex undertakings like making a business plan, or creating product modernization.

Ahead Learning Systems, in keeping with its vision of deepening the understanding of Filipino students of dynamic learning and thinking skills such as Mind Mapping, is an organizing partner in this one-day Mind Map.

For information on the Mind Mapping and Creative Conference, call 02777779 or 0917-3080000, or visit www.buzan.ph.

2009 Philippines 21 Young Leaders Initiative now open for nominations

ASH SOCIETY RECENTLY ANNOUNCED the opening of a new class of promising young achievers for the Philippines 21 Young Leaders Initiative. A flagship program of the Philippines Center, the Philippines 21 Young Leaders Initiative aims at developing a network of change-makers across various sectors (corporate, education and health) and other, collaborative and shared ideas of public service and other meaningful initiatives, and build relationships of trust and understanding.

Monitors must be between 21-42 years old, of Filipino citizenship, and have at least several leadership experiences in their chosen field, including but not limited to 15 following sectors: business, civil service, media, arts and culture, military, and government. Prospective Philippines 21 leaders must also demonstrate a commitment to devote time and effort to achieve goals and visions set by their class.

Open sessions on Philippines 21 follow the theme of 2005 will convene as a 2-day event where they will engage in roundtable discussions on issues concerning the Philippines and the Asia-Pacific region, in preparation for their participation in the international program, with the ultimate goal of developing proposals to address these issues. The annual forum is held in late last week August and is co-sponsored by Philippine Daily Inquirer, the official media partner of the Philippines 21 World Leaders Initiative.

Philippines 23 follows serves as the country's official delegation to the Asia Young Leaders Summit, organized annually by Asia Society's New York headquarters. This year's summit, scheduled for November in Kuala Lumpur, will bring together some 200 of the most dynamic next-generation leaders from Asia and the United States.

Nominations forms may be requested from the Philippines 21 Secretariat via email at philippines21@gmail.com or philippines21@unicef.org.ph on or before June 21, 2009. For sponsorship opportunities and other inquiries, please call Patricia Vega at 1632-3762-4374. Modified conditions will be notified by the third week of July.

UP writers workshop pushes the envelope

The Cartesian Problem

THERE IS NOTHING QUITE LIKE writing workshops to make a young writer leap on writing. Especially the undisciplined 20 National Premier Workshops. By official count, this year's workshop is the fifth that since the 45th, the workshop has been re-engineered to become a mid-career workshop. The fellows are writers who have been to other workshops, or shared writing groups, or even journals, or been here twice. These are writers

Each VM was located in the ARM lab on Long's Island in Camp John Hay, a haven, for many from our daily concerns with its tropical atmosphere and fairly remote location. We were whisked away to another beautiful site, the Bismark museum and visited to a boat, waterfalls, and a chance to appreciate all the art on exhibit. We also had a night of fireworks, presentations, more champagne, and a great sense of adventure.

with the magical Astoria Cofid as I'd like to stay on Sunset Road. Mid-week was Rolling Night, during which the week's top albums danced off their sound-alikes. There were some good ones from the Rolling list. But then, before the night was over, I was disappointed to see that the Rolling list was not as good as I had hoped. I was disappointed to see that the Rolling list was not as good as I had hoped. I was disappointed to see that the Rolling list was not as good as I had hoped.

gives me aching back up. And in a 15 min. school lunch sitting with poor Angela Steiner off to one side, playing the radio by screaming his own money and accounting the pedicure man. The last night of the workshop was our graduation and a parade of love.

is the start of the week-long work stop, which lasted from April 12 to 19. It follows and punctuates other battles down from the mountains and back to the real world, back to the daily demands of work. But we all left the week stop energized by the work of our peers, united by all the potentially great material displaced at the work site, busily and busily having fun all of the creative input and critical discussion of the week, and inspired to give it all and try to write those masterpieces.
